

TASMANIAN HAND CANCELLATIONS 1913–88: AN UPDATE IN 2001

by John Hardinge, Robbie McDonald & Vytas (Jack) Navickas

This article is dedicated to the memory of John William Avery who passed away on February 25th, 2001. John was best known as an eminent Tasmanian postal historian and co-author of several significant volumes in this area. In particular he was the first to research in any detail the Tasmanian postal markings of the Commonwealth or post-1912 period. His career in journalism as a high profile investigative reporter was highlighted by a stint with the Sydney Morning Herald. He also worked at various times with each of the major Tasmanian newspapers. As a young man John was a champion swimmer, captaining the Low Head Surf Life Saving Club in the late sixties. The irony that the most recent addition to the listing in this article derives from material presented in a postal bid sale that closed on February 25th would probably have tickled John's mischievous sense of humour. His sharp wit and keen eye for detail will be sadly missed.

The collecting of Tasmanian postmarks in the 1913–1988 era has been placed on a firm footing by the publication of three volumes in recent years [1, 2, 3]. As with any topic of investigation new information becomes available and needs to be documented for all interested parties. The Courier provides a suitable forum until such time as new editions of the research volumes are produced. This article updates information available to the authors that includes (1) previously unrecorded date stamps and new finds, (2) new early and late dates, (3) errors made in the original volumes and (4) miscellaneous information such as unrecorded ink colours and identifying features of the date stamp. Both normal and paid types are included in this listing. More detailed information concerning the historical aspects of the new discoveries is the subject of other articles to be published in future editions of The Courier. To maintain consistency the listing of this article assumes the same format as that employed in the earlier publications. Note that where not indicated otherwise, the rating remains the same as in the previous publications.
